General Comments or Valuable Insight

Trading 200 DMA's..

I've enclosed CENX tonight for a review.

Before I left for vacation 8/5/17 my last update featured CENX as a low risk buying opportunity.

Sometimes, as with CENX, they turn into a real screamer.

All you know is the Risk when an instrument hits a level like this.

It tells you which side of the trading card to attempt a position and the closing risk required to see if it is a tradable low for a bounce or something bigger.

This A.M. I set up another trade for you at the SPU/BOND 200 DMA.

BUY before you sell in the Spu's!!!

The Matches were close enough in the BUND,BOND,GOLD and Euro that showed you it was the only trade.

Oh yeah,lest we forget 2428 Spu's, which has been running the swings all qtr. That's 5 markets aligning at once.

Now the next question is how high can the Spread and Spu's bounce?

That is yet to be determined. When it sets up all you have is a low risk entry with definable risk.

The bigger point is the set up for trade entry like this comes along once in a while.

We haven't seen a set up like this since last November.

Time will tell if it's a bounce or something more.

Last week I wrote that the Bonds would print 157.16 and that would be the time and place to match up with a low in the Spu's.

It was a big match with SPU/BOND @ its 200 DMA

The extreme was finally confirmed with the new capital flow on the NYSE opening. NYSE (U.S. Pit Futures) Opening Range Trade!

I've written this because many of you have seemingly lost the plot on the bigger turns.

Tomorrow will see the VIX trading around its 200 DMA.

For the past several Wednesday's we've put in Index highs for the week.

I'll write further on the mid-week shuffle in the A.M.
